I'm an experienced web designer and developer looking for a full-time position to take advantage of my experience as a web development professional, I have experience in search engine optimization, ecommerce, typography, UI, UX, programming as well as web and print design and I'm constantly learning more on a daily basis. I eat, breathe and live to design and code.

I consider myself a pretty big nerd, which I believe in this industry you an edge. I'm personally and professionally vested in my work and the continued development of my skills so I'm always looking for new ways to improve them, whether it's learning a new language, library or new methodologies (I need to know what makes things tick!).

Sure I can be slightly obsessive, but well within reason, I'm not insane or crazy, I believe a project needs to be as flawless as possible, from start to finish. I've been known to go through as many iterations and revisions as I need to make that happen, within a given time frame of course. The world is full of deadlines, and they MUST be met.
